

The definition of substance X gives the content as dried or anhydrous. Do the solvents need to be taken into account when determining the assay?

You are here:

EDQM FAQs / EDQM FAQs in English / EUROPEAN PHARMACOPOEIA & INTERNATIONAL HARMONISATION / General Chapters and Monographs / WATER - LOSS ON DRYING - SOLVENTS / The definition of substance X gives the content as dried or anhydrous. Do the solvents need to be taken into account when determining the assay?

Answer:

In accordance with the general monograph Substances for pharmaceutical use (2034), the content of residual solvents is taken into account for calculation of the assay content of the substance, the specific optical rotation and the specific absorbance. This information is therefore not given in the individual monographs concerned.